Organizational Transformation and Me with Rick McAllister

Our organizations are going through transformation, so, what does that mean for me? This session will explore the individual and professional considerations that are affected by organizational change. Discussion will focus on strategies to understand, manage and contribute to the organizational change. This interactive session will challenge you to think through the implications of personal leadership, the process of change, environmental assessment and the concept of “Adaptive Capability” in both large and small group discussions.

Full conference breakout sessions on Wednesday, July 25th and Thursday, July 26th
